

250 PRISONERS PUT TO DEATH

Conspirators in the Recent Mutiny Executed Yesterday in Constantinople.

NADIR PASHA HANGED AT DAWN.

Second Eunuch of Abdul Hamid's Palace Strung Up on Galata Bridge and His Body Left Hanging for Hours—New Turkish Government to Run Down Instigators of Massacres at Adana.

Constantinople, April 29.—The constitutionalists have at last triumphed in the recent mutiny. The military court, sitting in the war office, today condemned about 250 prisoners to death, and they were executed.

Nadir Pasha Hanged at Dawn.

Nadir Pasha, the second eunuch of the palace, whose sentence was pronounced yesterday, was hanged at dawn on the Galata bridge, and his great body was viewed by thousands in the early morning hours.

New Sultan Takes Oath Next Week.

The national assembly, which met today under the presidency of Said Pasha, decided that the sultan Mehmed V should take the oath of the constitution within a week. The assembly also ratified the deposition of Abdul Hamid to Salonica.

Difficulty in Forming Cabinet.

It is not expected that the new cabinet will be organized before Saturday. The difficulty at present consists in finding suitable men for the ministries of finance and interior. Tewfik Pasha, who will be the grand vizier, has sent a communication to the provincial officials on this subject. The government has decided to send a commission to Adana to try by court-martial the instigators of the massacre, and the commission is authorized to act with the utmost severity.

Chief Authors of Recent Mutiny.

It is alleged that the chief authors of the recent mutiny were Abdul Hamid's favorite son, Prince Mehmed Burhaneddin, and his brother, Prince Mehmed, son of Khalid Pasha, the former grand vizier, and Nadir Pasha, who were engaged for a long time prior to the rising in corrupting the troops. The two former have fled.

Former Sultan Dreaded Darkness.

Mr. Bey, inspector general of the Salonica police, who was charged with the transport of the former sultan to Salonica, related that when he arrived at the palace at 1 o'clock in the morning he found Abdul Hamid in a large room, which was illuminated as though for a gala occasion by every candle and torch that could be found in the building. This was because Abdul Hamid dreaded darkness; he has always been in fear of the darkness. He was quite alone, in a corner in the same negligent attire as on the previous day, when the deposition from the national assembly notified him of his deposition.

The Irony of Fate.

Upon being informed that he must depart, he beseechingly appeared not to be taken to Salonica. He wanted to go to the Charaghah palace. Finding his applications in vain, he resigned himself to his fate. He entered the carriage in a dejected manner and spoke not another word. On arriving at the railway station he appeared to be stunned by fear and was unable to steady himself by grasping the railing leading into the train, which by the irony of fate was a splendid carriage bearing his own monogram which he himself ordered built, but had only ridden in once—a short ride which left him with a hatred for railways. This therefore was his first long journey in the imperial carriage.

Ordinary Business Operations Being Resumed.

Washington, April 29.—Regarding conditions in Constantinople, Ambassador Leshman says that probably martial law will be continued for another week or two as a necessary measure to maintain order. a Dartmouth Graduate, Class of 1908.

Northampton, Mass., April 29.—In a fit of anger or insanity because she had broken an engagement to marry him and refused to renew it, Miss Helen Ayer Marden, a member of the senior class at Smith college, and then, turning the revolver on herself, committed suicide. Miss Marden was taken to the Dickinson hospital, where she died at noon.

Tried to Force His Attention on Miss

Marden.

Smith, whose home was in Chicago, had been in Northampton for several days. It is said that he had persisted in following Miss Marden and tried to force his attention on her, but she refused to have anything to do with him. This morning, when most of the students of Smith were at chapel, Miss Marden came out of the students' building where she resided, and she stayed away from the chapel exercises. It is understood because she feared she would be further pursued by Smith on the way there. When she came out on the campus she had gone only a short distance when she met Smith. There were no students near, and it is not known whether there was any conversation between the two.

A Shot and a Scream.

Suddenly workmen not far distant from a shop and a scream. Turning around, they saw Smith standing beside the girl with a smoking revolver in his hand. Before they could reach the couple, they saw Smith raise the revolver and fire two more shots at the girl. Miss Marden said that she fell to the ground, and Smith immediately placed the muzzle of the weapon to his own head and fired, falling dead beside the young woman.

Shooter Temporarily Crazed.

Miss Marden's sister, Louise Marden, a member of the junior class at Smith, and one of her classmates, Miss Smith's sister, Miss Edna P. Smith, Louise Marden said today that in her opinion Smith was temporarily crazed at the time he shot his wife. She spoke in the highest terms of the young man. It is understood here that Smith had been suffering from a nervous breakdown since his graduation from Dartmouth.

GENERAL HAINS A WITNESS.

AFFECTING SCENE IN COURT.

Father of Defendant Recites Incidents

in Son's Life from Boyhood.

Flushing, N. Y., April 29.—An affecting scene occurred today at the trial of Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., when

General Hains, retired, the old father of the defendant, related with suppression the chief incidents in his son's life from boyhood to the time

when driven frantic by his wife's alleged infidelity, he shot down the man whom the defense contended was the cause of it.

Beginning with the boy's tendency

to nightmarish and general excitability

during his earlier years, the general

traced his career through the campaigns of the Spanish-American war,

when he fought under his father in Porto Rico, and "always in the way on the firing line."

In 1900, while detailed at Boston,

the captain wooed and married Claudia

Libby, the general said, and spent years in unbroken happiness with his wife until they came to New York in 1906 and met William E. Annis.

The harrowing scenes which ensued

at the family conference held after the captain's return from eight months of service in the Philippines

were depicted by the general in a trepidulous voice.

The old soldier never once lost his self-control. When the strain was most severe, and seemed likely to break down, he squared his shoulders

and went on.

Things looked doubtful for the defense earlier in the day, when the testimony of General Hains was temporarily blocked by a ruling by Justice

Garretson that the general could not testify as to irrational conduct by the captain until it had been shown that insanity existed at the time of the homicide.
